The National Employment Standards: Assessing Labor's New Safety Net

The Rudd Government has released what it is calling the "final" version of the National Employment Standards that from January 2010 will set minimum conditions for federal system employees.

Professor Rosemary Owens and Professor Andrew Stewart from the University of Adelaide Law School will analyse the content of the NES, explain how they will relate to the new award system, and consider some of the policy implications of the decisions that Labor has made (and in some cases not yet made) about its statutory safety net.

Date: Monday 4 August, 2008

Time: 5:30pm until 7:00pm
(Drinks and nibbles will be supplied)

Venue: Staff Common Room, Level 1 (ground floor), Ligertwood Building, University of Adelaide

RSVP: Please RSVP to Fotina Agalidis by Friday 1 August
